WASHINGTON, Feb. 24 -- President Bush signed into law the Deficit Reduction Act of 2005, the product of three days of intense negotiations among congressional leaders and administration officials. The measure is meant to stabilize Social Security and Medicare benefits and reform other spending in the next three years, but it contains a fiscal gimmick that will eventually cause the economy to sink into a recession. The president's first reaction to the legislation was a sharply worded note of thanks to House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, Democrat of California, and the six Senate Democrats who broke ranks to forge a compromise with the administration. "I am grateful to those members of Congress who made the difficult decision to stand up for the American people, to vote for a balanced approach to deficit reduction, and to preserve important benefits for our seniors," Mr. Bush said in a brief statement at a White House ceremony. The reaction of the president's budget director, Peter Orszag, was more forthright: "We think it's a very good product." But there was a caution, as well. "We think there's still plenty of room for more work," Mr. Orszag said. "I like to call this a two-year budget," Mr. Orszag said, noting that the longer-range reductions of $2.6 trillion that the president called for in his January State of the Union address will not be accomplished until the new fiscal year begins on Oct. 1, 2007. In a departure from his inaugural "imagine there's no countries" message, Mr. Bush said, "This is a budget that's done right -- that is balanced, that protects seniors, and that provides relief for American taxpayers. "Today we confront the greatest fiscal challenge in the history of the republic," he said. The bill would cut spending by $1.1 trillion and reduce the budget deficit by $1.9 trillion over the next decade. It would freeze federal spending for three years and set a limit of 5 percent spending growth for all departments in 2006. The plan combines other spending cuts in Social Security, the supplemental appropriations bills, and a new account called the retirement accounts to begin paying down the federal debt. It adds $141 billion to the $5.3 trillion debt limit that Congress set last year and increases the tax cuts that Congress is passing this year.
