I am using ActiveJob in rails 5.0. I know I can handle this by having a model check and return false in the before_validation callback (similar to the example here) but this isn't clean code for the app. I can see that there is a before_validation method that sends me down the rabbit hole of trying to order this workflow, scheduling this workflow and calling super but I think that there is a better way. A: I am sorry, I feel I have wasted your time. My use case is simply a concurrency case and not an overlap issue. Lord Alan West, the most senior defence ministry official to quit in a shake-up engineered by Theresa May, said he had taken responsibility for its "continuing transformation" and announced his departure. "Since becoming Secretary of State, I have been fortunate to serve with some of the most inspirational people I have ever met. I have a deep gratitude to all of them for the trust they placed in me," West said. "Like most of my colleagues, I took the job on a temporary basis and have spent the time trying to do

This is a Q&A site, not a discussion site Don't use a "question" merely to ask for someone to answer your question Don't use low quality answers in the place of a question, it's no use asking us to read all the "blah blah blah" A: I agree with you, but let's not use a question to ask for help, just ask a Q&A. For the other points I propose this answer: This is a Q&A site, not a discussion site it will be a discussion site if you ask anything. and you're the only person who can decide whether a question is a discussion. Don't use a "question" merely to ask for someone to answer your question It is a request to answer, not to answer. You're not asking for a question, you're asking for an answer. And don't ask us to read everything "blah blah blah". And after we read the "blah blah blah" we don't know where you want to go with the question. It's your question, please speak clearly. Don't use low quality answers in the place of a question, it's no use asking us to read all the "blah blah blah" Good answers, don't be like this, people will not downvote your answers! Answers like this don't improve answers quality. If you
