Common Dental Procedures Offered by a Dentist

Crowns and Bridges: Dental crowns and bridges can repair damaged teeth and restore their form and function. When a crown is bonded into place, it completely covers the visible part of a tooth. A bridge fills in the gap left by one or more missing teeth.

Dental Implants: Dental implants are prosthetics meant to take the place of lost or damaged teeth. Through a procedure known as osseointegration, the implant fixture is surgically inserted into the mandible and fuses with the bone cells. Dental implants are a more permanent alternative to tooth roots to maintain face features and jawbone structure.

Porcelain Veneers: Porcelain veneers, which are thin, semi-translucent "facings" that are usually bonded to the visible front surfaces of teeth, are among the safest cosmetic choices. Veneers cover up a wide range of cosmetic imperfections, from small chips and cracks to severe discolouration and misaligned teeth.

Resin Bonding: Direct composite resin bonding is a treatment option for small chips, gaps, or slightly misaligned teeth that need minimal repairs. The tooth-coloured bonding material is immediately placed on the tooth surface, shaped, cemented with a curing light, and polished all in one office visit.

Teeth Whitening: General dentists also provide expert teeth whitening to remove external stains and lighten tooth tones. Rejuvenating your smile can be achieved by significantly brightening discoloured teeth with in-office treatments or custom-fitted take-home trays filled with powerful bleaching gel.
